Paul D. Beattie, Cousin of the Man Accused of Wife Murder, Swears Prisoner Admitted Crime.

Mothers of the Dead Woman and Beulah Binford Tell Revolting Tales in Courtroom.

Va. Aug 28.—Paul D. Beattle, cousin of Henry Clay Beattle, Jr., who stands indicted for the murder of his wife testified late today that accused had told him twenty-four after the murder how sorry he was had done it," a circumstance relation the crime that the witness hither-ad suppressed.

Coming as dramatically and as unexpectedly as the pathetic tale an hour before of Mrs. R. V. Owen, mother of the dead woman, as to the domestic intelletly of her daughter as a result of the husband's disease, the brief but thrilling testimony given by Paul Beattle created a profound sensation.

Paul Beattle, at the coroner's inquest,
a nervous wreck, but today strong and determined, poured out a tale which confessedly had troubled his mind not only because he purchased the shotgun for Henry, but because he had not until today told all he knew of the case.
With quivering lips and tear-dimmed eyes he set forth the story against which his heart and sympathy had for days
been revolting.

"I hated to testify against my own fiesh and kin," he murmured as the muscles of his throat pulsated, "but my wife, my child and the duty I owe to my city forced me to do so."

Crowd Holds Its Breath.

The gasp that rose simultaneously from the throats of those in the stuffy courtroom was strikingly audible and for a moment the crowd held its breath, while Panil Beatile continued:

"Henry himself told me that he wanted me to stick by him, but I said to him, this looks mighty black to me, and you've got me into a lot of trouble."

"Henry told me, 'I wish to God I had not done it. I would not have done it for a million dollars, but she never loved me, she only married me for my money."

money."

It was late when this stage of the trial was reached and adjournment was taken until tomorrow morning, when cross-examination will continue.

In the meantime Henry Clay Beattle, Jr. was taken back to Richmond to permit of a conference there with counsel. The prosecution let it be known that it practically finished its case.

Mr. Clark's hosts said the speaker was exercised over the president's speech and that the speaker had intimated that he would have something to say about the president and the tariff beard in particular. They said Mr. Clark has not the most favorable opinion of the members of the board as experts on tariff and that if the report of the board is needlessly delayed the source of income of the board may be cut off by the lower house of congress.

Mr. Clark will also review the history with arson and conspired bearing of his case continued untill September 26.

HE saloon controversy is settled. Judge M. L. Ritchie rescued the saloonkeepers from their dilemma hy a ruling which will easily make it possible for all reputable persons who apply for a license to comply with the terms of the law as interpreted by Judge Ritchie.

The problem was how sixty-eight saloonkeepers whose applications for renewal of licenses were returned because they failed to conform to the literal provisions of the law which requires that a certificate of recommendation signed by five resident fresholders of the voting district in which the license is to be effective accompany the application.

Sixty-eight applications for licenses were returned to the applicants Saturday because the applications were insufficient in that the signers were not bonafide resident fresholders of the district. It developed that in district 54 there were so few resident fresholders that it was impossible for the saloonkeepers to obtain the requisite number.

A committee of saloonkeepers yesterday decided to make a test case of the application of Fred Kuster for a license in district 54, where the greatest pancity of resident fresholders exists. After the application of Mr. Kuster was returned to him by the city recorder he acted on the advice of the counsel for the saloon men and took it to the district court timself to be filed. Margaret Zane Witcher, county clerk, declined to receive the application because it did not come through the city recorder's office.
